At the request of Westland Tree Service I was asked to evaluate a tree at 58 Hillandale Ave, White Plains NY. This is my observation and recommendation:

Adjacent to the left rear corner of the backyard and approximately 20' from the house stands a 30" dbh Norway Maple (Acer platanoides). It appears that this tree started out as co-dominant stems which grafted to form a weak unstable trunk. This tree has multiple structural defects including but not limited to splits, included bark, and cavities. It has been competing with nearby trees for sunlight which has also caused a severe lean towards house and its roots are very shallow and exposed (girdling). Due to the fact that this tree poses a threat to multiple targets should it fail I recommend it be removed.

Respectfully
